Zidoun-Bossuyt Luxembourg is thrilled to welcome for the first time in Europe, José Parlá, with a solo exhibition titled Arterial, from 6 June to 27 July 2024.

“Arterial: A Journey Through Urban and Natural Landscapes”

In Arterial, I invite viewers to embark on a visual journey that traverses the dynamic landscapes of both the urban jungle and the serene tranquility of the upstate forests. Inspired by my personal experiences navigating the arteries of New York City and the winding roads leading to the nearby wilderness, each painting serves as a metaphorical exploration of connectivity, movement, and transformation.

As I traveled between the city’s bustling streets and the peaceful embrace of nature, I couldn’t help but draw parallels between the intricate networks of roads, bridges, and subway lines and the complicated systems of veins, arteries, and cells within the human body. As blood flows through our veins, energy pulses through the city’s infrastructure, creating a constant sense of motion and vitality. Through heavy texture, collage, and a vibrant color palette inspired by the urban landscape and the ever-changing hues of nature’s seasons, I aim to capture the essence of this duality. Each layer of paint represents a moment in time, a snapshot of the cyclical nature of life and death, growth, and decay.

From the stark beauty of winter’s icy grip to the vibrant burst of color that heralds the arrival of spring, Arterial; invites viewers to contemplate the interconnectedness of all things and to find beauty in life’s rhythm and chaos.

José Parlá

José Parlá creates paintings and multidisciplinary works based on his interest in hybrid forms of abstraction. He draws inspiration from various mediums including music, calligraphy, dance, and the decay of urban architecture and advertisements. His works poetically challenge ideas about language, politics, identity, and how we define places and spaces. Parlá's relationship with mark-making is physical and textural, incorporating the body's gestures into a painterly stream of consciousness composed of areas of addition, erasure, and layering that challenges the status quo of visual culture.

Biography

Parlá was born in 1973 to Cuban parents in Miami, Florida and lives and works out of Brooklyn, New York.
